BÖNEBÜTTTEL Throwing out as-new and high-quality computer desks because the company is undergoing renovation and switching to desks which can be raised electronically? “No, it’s too much,” said Aline Steiner, a marketing manager in the Neumünster-based Markert Group. The furniture would actually be perfect for a school computer room, thought the former Bönebüttel resident whose daughter goes to primary school there. “Great idea,” the IT teacher Rainer Hafemann and headmistress Andrea Jordt at the school agreed.

Seven as-new computer desks thus moved into the computer room, two into the staff room, and two to the satellite site in Großharrie. There was already a classroom set of laptops and tablet PCs. Only the desks were outdated. Even the used desks are still worth some 3000 Euros; Jordt and Hafemann are delighted with the fantastic equipment donation.

“Writing short texts, editing images, and trying out great effects: there’s a lot more space for it now on the smart new desks,” say Jette (8) and Lene (9) from third grade at the primary school during the visit and proudly show off their new computer room. This, says headmistress Andrea Jordt, is also used by pupils from Großharrie on Thursdays. All pupils have therefore benefited from it. rgs
